

AMBITION 2007

WHAT IF...

- you weren't sure what career you wanted?
- you could talk to someone who knew what they were talking about?
- you could get on the way to a well paid and rewarding job?
- you tried harder?
- you had more ambition in 2007?

You could start by coming along to Ambition 2007 and talking one-to-one to advisers who know about the career they represent. So, if you want to be an architect, talk to one. If you want to be a nurse, talk to a nurse, whatever you want to do, come along to Ambition 2007 and find out more.

If you have no idea about which career to follow, coming to the event could give you the spark to ignite your ambition and then who knows what you could achieve.

Representatives from many significant employers, such as IBM, Lloyds Bank, the Armed Forces, the National Health Service, Bristol City Council, the BBC and Tesco and many more have agreed to take part.

There will be a 'Student Zone' where you can find out more about college and sixth form life and an 'Apprenticeship Zone' where you can find out more about earning whilst you are learning a trade.

There will also be one-to-one advice on careers guidance, Education Maintenance Allowances, UCAS and student finance information.

Ambition 2007 will be held at the City Ground, Ashton Gate on 1st February 2007 from 6.00 pm until 9.00 pm. All are welcome, particularly parents and guardians.
